City Council and Postal Service Explore Keeping Services in Center

by Virginia Beauchamp

When it came to scheduling the Greenbelt City Council work-session with representatives of the U.S. Postal Service on March 15, City Clerk Kathleen Gallagher knew at once they would need a large space. So she reserved the Multipurpose Room in the Community Center for the meeting.

She was right. Besides full council membership, three city staff and three post office representatives – all gathered around a big table at the front of the room – was a large contingent of Greenbelt citizens and representatives of local businesses occupying rows of chairs that filled the rest of the space.

The meeting's purpose, as spelled out by Greenbelt Mayor Judith Davis, was to figure out "how we will have postal service in the Center." When the new postal facility at Ora Glen Drive and Hanover Parkway is open for service, the old post office in the basement below the Co-op grocery store will close.

"The new building is 90 percent ready," said Capital District Manager Tim Heaney. "We're not pressured about the time to move." Heaney indicated that neither gas nor water for the new facility is hooked up yet. "We won't accept it till we go through a check list," he added.

"It's really nice looking," Heaney continued. He said 250 additional post office boxes will be available for renters. "There will also be an additional full-service window," he said.

Davis commented that sidewalks would be necessary along both Hanover Parkway and Ora Glen Drive.

Center Service

Davis went on to stress the continued need for a small unit in the town center. She wondered why the original commitment to maintain the present counter was no longer being honored.

What had changed, Heaney noted, was the later transformation plan for the entire postal system based on a Presidential Task Force Commission. "We must be more effective in managing real estate," Heaney said.

"Technology has taken over," he went on. People can order stamps now through the internet. They can prepare labels and postage at home. Carriers can pick up packages. "We have to do business smart," he said.

Heaney said approval for the new facility in Greenbelt "got in just under this new process of change." The best way to keep a postal window open in Old Greenbelt, he stressed, was to arrange with a local business for a contract postal unit or CPU.

Co-op Possibility

At this point Davis invited Dorrie Bates, president of the Greenbelt Consumer Services co-operative that manages the Co-op supermarket, to join the group at the table. As the major business in the Roosevelt Center, the Co-op had been the first business to be approached about opening a CPU.

"Unfortunately," Bates said, "it looked as though the Co-op would incur a huge loss." She stressed the adjective. "We felt we would assume a $50,000 two-year cost."

Bates went on to express her understanding that such a facility would have to stay open during the hours of operation of the business and that it would have to be staffed during all that time.

Not so, said Heaney. "It would be your business. You

City employees demolish the old Jaycees/Lions Club/Isaak Walton League/Athletic Club clubhouse off Crescent Road on Saturday morning.

Stalwart Old Clubhouse Is Easy Mark for Backhoe

by James Giese

On the weekend of March 11 and 12 a Greenbelt Public Works crew tore down what has been most recently known as the Jaycee Clubhouse. The Greenbelt City Council had determined that the building's condition did not warrant it being utilized, it would be too expensive to repair and was a liability and hazard to the city in its present state. Ken Hall, director of Public Works, told council on March 13, that the building came down quicker than expected. The building was torn down and the basement hole was filled in the two day time period allotted. Work was done on the weekend in order not to disrupt the nearby St. Hugh's Parochial School

The building was constructed shortly after the town of Greenbelt was built by the federal government. Of masonry construction, it had a rustic log cabin-type interior appearance. The basement contained a large room and a bathroom with a toilet. On the main floor was an even larger room.

The building was located ad-

Local Musician Ben Kepler Looks Ahead To Teaching Children

by Sharahn D. Boykin

Music has been part of Ben Kepler's life for over a decade. He knows how to play more than 15 instruments. He was a member of a local band for five years and played in several school bands. However, this Greenbelt resident has no desire to live the life of a rock star – Kepler wants to teach music.

On April 1 Kepler will play the trumpet in his senior recital at the University of Maryland, College Park. The 22-year-old senior will perform solo and in trios and quartets for a half hour.

Performing in the recital is a graduation requirement for Kepler who is a music education major. Learning to play all the major instruments used in a band or symphony is another requirement, Kepler said. While attending the university, some of the instruments Kepler learned to play include the: flute, oboe, bassoon, clarinet, saxophone, French Horn, trombone, tuba, violin, viola, cello, string bass and piano.

"I had a desire to learn more instruments and play more instruments. I was happy playing trumpet and playing guitar since those were my first two instruments but I was always fascinated by other people's saxophones and stuff like that," he said.

After graduation, Kepler would like to teach music at an elementary or middle school. He also would like to eventually teach kids individually through private lessons.

"It's fun to work one-on-one with someone and see them develop as a player," he said.

Fine-tuning His Skills

Even though Kepler knows how to play several instruments, he has been playing the trumpet and the guitar since he was 10 years old. He fine-tuned his skills while playing in a variety of school bands. He played trumpet in Eleanor Roosevelt's jazz band, symphonic wind ensemble, and marching band. He learned to play the banjo in the school's Dixie land combo.

"They had very good band and orchestra programs so they kept me interested in playing but I also studied privately with a few people that were retired from the U.S. Navy Band.

The variation that music offers maintains Kepler's attraction to the field of music. "It's never quite the same. There's always more to learn. You always get better at what you play and how you play it," he said.

Although Kepler was inspired by the Grammy Award winning trumpet player Wynton Marsalis and legendary guitar player Johnny Cash, his friends also played a role in his musical influence. Kepler never took formal guitar lessons. He and his friends learned from each other by sharing techniques.

Guys in Ties

While in middle school, Kepler and two friends started the local band Guys in Ties. The trio, Kepler on trumpet, Joe Pugliese on the saxophone and Isaac Rehner on guitar, performed at the New Deal Café's open mike night and local parties for five years.

During his last two years of high school, Kepler decided to become a music teacher at an elementary or middle school. "I like working with all different age kids," he said. There's something nice about that.

Artful Afternoon Features Duo "Magpie" and Crafts

The April Artful Afternoon will be held on Sunday, April 2 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Community Center and offers activities for all ages.

From 1 to 3 p.m. there will be an opportunity to make crafts with Jill St. John, curator of the Greenbelt Museum and domestic diva. St. John will lead participants in oilcloth make-and-take crafts inspired by decorative arts from the museum's collection period of the 1930s and 1940s.

Free Concert

Following that at 3 p.m. the musical highlight this month is a free concert by world/folk music duo "Magpie." The duo of Terry Leonino and Greg Artzner will present "Put the Sun Back in the Sky," a musical journey for all ages through America during the Great Depression. Learn more about the period of Greenbelt's founding as Magpie weaves a musical portrait of the people and the hardships and hopes that kept them going.

Two Votes Not Enough

We find nothing ambiguous in the Greenbelt City Charter as to what city councilmembers can and cannot do if only three are present at an official city meeting nor do we believe the charter should be amended in the manner requested by council on March 13. The charter provides: “The affirmative vote of a majority of the members elected to the council shall be necessary to adopt any ordinance, resolution, order or vote; except that a vote to adjourn, or regarding the attendance of members, may be adopted by a majority of the members present” While the charter does not define “order” or “vote,” they are common words commonly understood. The city council cannot adopt an ordinance or resolution, give an order or take action by a vote without the affirmative vote of a majority of the council’s five members, except as noted in the charter.

That being the case, the 2 to 1 vote of council on February 27 (with only three members present) to recommend to the Prince George’s Planning Board approval of a detailed site plan for Greenbelt Crossing was not an allowable action under the City Charter and the Planning Board should not have been advised of the recommendation. Not until March 13 when the entire council voted 4 to 1 on the same motion did an official city position take place.

On March 13 council requested that a charter amendment be prepared to permit 2 to 1 votes on some lesser matters than adoption of ordinances and resolutions. We think that council will find it difficult to define appropriate lesser matters. It would appear that a recommendation on a future new development in Greenbelt would fit into this category, since the immediate circumstance was a vote on Greenbelt Crossing. But we consider such votes very important and significant.

Another matter suggested by a councilmember as appropriate would be recommendation of the city on the passage of proposed state legislation. Many legislative proposals are indeed no-brainers as to whether the city should or should not support them. Such proposals engender no controversy and council votes are unanimous among those present. However, there could be highly controversial legislative issues coming before a council where it would be essential that a city position represent a majority of those elected.

We do not believe that citizens will be comfortable with permitting city positions to be taken by a minority of councilmembers. Nor do we believe a three-person council majority would want a council decision to take place if two of those three were absent and a 2 to 1 vote went the other way.

To amend the City Charter to permit that to happen would, in our view, be a serious step backward for the high standard of governance that the city has experienced for the past nearly 70 years.

The February 27 failure to obtain three votes on a motion is unique. No one we have talked to can remember another time when it was not possible for a city matter to be decided by a majority of the members of the council. In the past, when a potential problem might occur the council has changed its meeting schedule or deferred the matter to another date when there would be sufficient attendance.

Tax Commitment Needs More than Simple Motion

Council is considering approving a Memorandum of Understanding with Academy Theaters, LLC on March 27 by a simple motion. Although we commend the Greenbelt City Council decision to place the proposal on the March 13 meeting agenda for preliminary discussion in order to give advance notice of its consideration, we do not think this proposal should be approved by simple motion.

The memorandum is an agreement in which the city will reduce its Admissions and Amusement Tax for up to five years. In return, Academy Theaters will remodel and add stadium seating at the now closed eight movie theater complex at the Beltway Plaza and reopen them. Without these theaters reopening, the city will not receive the very substantial amount of Admissions and Amusement Tax that it did receive from the previous theater operation.

We consider the proposal to give up some of this tax for a short time to get the theaters reopened and generating future taxes to have merit. However, a city council action that would commit not only this but future councils to changing a tax rate requires, we feel, a more formal action than a simple motion.

At a minimum, we think the memorandum should be approved by a formal resolution of council. That would require (unless rules are suspended by a super-majority vote) presentation for first reading at one meeting, consideration and discussion at a second meeting and enactment by a vote of a majority of council. Should council decide to change the resolution, it would need to be reconsidered again at a subsequent meeting before it could be adopted.

THANKS

I have just left Bella, my Vizsla, at her daycare where she will play with her dog and children friends, run in the woods and swim in the creek. Her life is good. Because of her, so is mine.

I have recently completed surgery and chemo for a lung mass. Bella and I are very fortunate. We live in a wonderful community and because of Bella, my support system through the diagnosis and treatment of my illness was exceptional, as was hers. There are so many we would like to thank. Aurora and Eva brought Bella to Walter Reed to visit. This gave a difficult time needed sunshine. Not only did they exercise Bella but exercised me one step at a time up Ridge Road.

My pretend daughter, Shel, and Budda (now Willy) came by every day to visit and made me smile and because she was so endearing as a daughter made me stronger. Bruce and Mavie – grocery shopping, sharing lunches and staying till we ate. Janet and her family, especially Hucklebear, for their morning visits to pick Bella up and return her home each day with tail a-wagging.

Chris and her Greys and their antics were a wonderful pick-me-up. Jess and Little Bear brought toys and yummys for Bella and me. Finally, Sharon always knew just how I was feeling and Twaa-ka can only make you laugh like a puppy can!

Thank you – all of you.

“They finally figured out how to put the 'stop' back in stop sign.”

On Screen

“Mrs. Henderson” Bares All

“Mrs. Henderson Presents,” opening at Old Greenbelt Theatre Friday, March 24 features the redoubtable Dame Judi Dench in the eponymous lead. She plays a widowed society matron who buys a closed vaudeville house in late 1930s London and strips the programming to its bare essentials [sic]. Buttressed by manager Vivian Van Damm (Bob Hoskins), a professional from abroad, Mrs. Henderson strives to succeed under stiff censorship rules – and Luftwaffe blitz bombing. Based on a true story that’s tweaked for humor, the film has won admirers for Dench’s didoes and the bare-all theaterscapes, plus detractors for perceived fancifulness. Director Stephen Frears recently did the serious, much-praised “Dirty Pretty Things.” R for nudity and some profanity. 102 minutes.

This improvement will reduce congestion and improve safety along northbound Kenilworth Avenue. Other improvements include shoulder reconstruction along northbound Kenilworth Avenue, drainage improvements, traffic signal modification and replacement of traffic loop detectors with video detection units, which will improve signal timing at Kenilworth Avenue and Cherrywood Lane.

During construction motorists can expect single-lane closures along Kenilworth Avenue between 9 p.m. and 5:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. The SHA will provide arrow boards, drums and temporary traffic signs to guide motorists through the work zone.

The SHA reminds motorists patience will be needed during the construction project.

Holy Cross to Host Author on April 2

On Sunday, April 2 at 9:15 a.m. Rev. Arthur Simon, author of "How Much Is Enough? Hungering for God in an Affluent Culture," will lead a discussion of his book and the issues it raises. Simon's book asked why, in the face of unprecedented affluence, do so many feel discontented. He observes that possessions may capture the heart but they cannot nourish the soul. The discussion will be held at Holy Cross Lutheran Church, 6905 Greenbelt Road.

Simon, founder and president emeritus of the citizen's lobby against hunger, Bread for the World, led the organization for almost two decades and directed the Washington office of the Christian Children's Fund. He was pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church on New York's Lower East Side from 1961 to 1972. Among Simon's other books, "Bread for the World" won the National Religious Book Award and was described by economists as a clear, convincing analysis of world hunger. He is also the author of "The Politics of World Hunger" and "Grace at the Table: Ending Hunger in God's World."

The public is invited to the presentation and discussion which will last about an hour. Copies of "How Much Is Enough?" will be available for purchase. All royalties from sales of the book go to Bread for the World. For more information call Holy Cross Lutheran Church at 301-345-5111.

Learn About Islam

GIVE THANKS

Every breath that we breathe is a blessing from God and we learn from the Prophet Solomon (peace be upon him) to recognize these blessings each day. The Holy Qur'an tells us how he never forgot to be thankful to God. He is quoted to have said, "This is by the grace of my Lord, to test me whether I am grateful or ungrateful! And if any is grateful, it is (a gain) for his own soul; but if any is ungrateful, truly my Lord is free of all needs, supreme in honor."
– The Holy Qur'an, 27:40

Remember to count your blessings. For more information about gratefulness from an Islamic perspective, call 301-982-9463 or email info@searchislam.org or visit www.searchislam.org.

could have it open at the hours you choose.” Nor does a CPU need to be staffed all the time. An employee could be busy about other work until needed at the window.

Good Business

Heaney said most businesses find a CPU is a “good draw” for business. Mitch King, another post office representative, manager for governmental relations for the Capital District, agreed. He described a CPU that had opened recently in a Silver Spring bakery. It had much increased foot traffic in the store, he pointed out, which now had a much larger customer base.

“They were very satisfied with the arrangement,” King said. Currently the postal service is negotiating with business owners in both College Park and Rockville, he added.

“What about size?” Councilmember Edward Putens asked. The minimum space would be 12 feet by 12 feet, he was told. In the apparent unwillingness of the present Center merchants to take on such a responsibility, Putens wondered if the city itself could operate a CPU.

In any case, Heaney said, “you have to account for security.” The facility would also have to be wheelchair accessible. The postal service, however, would pay initial start-up costs.

When Davis returned to the idea of keeping the present counter space open in the Center facility, similar to one run by the postal service in Largo, Heaney said it was not a viable option. Even to consider it would require a year of study.

The major consideration, he pointed out, is the “drastic change” in postal operations since 1998. First-class mail has declined since then by 20 percent, he said. The internet affects how people do business. He indicated that 44 mail processing centers are currently being consolidated.

“We must maintain efficiency,” Heaney stressed. He said that the annual budget of the U. S. Postal Service is now projecting a one and one-half billion dollar loss.

Van Possibility

When the mayor stressed the importance of continuing nearby service, especially considering the large number of senior citizens in Old Greenbelt, Heaney remarked on the possibility of a mobile van with specific hours of service on certain days. “It could serve as a stop-gap measure,” he said.

A drawback is that vans require a lot of maintenance. Only two are now available in the area, he said, as all the rest were dedicated to service following the Katrina hurricane.

Noting the presence of Bill Wilkerson among members of the audience, Davis wondered if the New Deal Café, with its expanded space, might consider hosting a CPU. (Wilkerson serves on the café board.) He said he would bring up the subject but he couldn’t speak for the group.

Heaney said he would work with anyone who will sponsor a CPU. He reiterated that the postal service “controls a monopoly of the mail.” They are controlling cost by “not hiring,” he said. Some 90,000 career positions have been cut recently, he stressed.

The 19,000 post offices that “don’t pay their way are sustained by those that do.” No tax dollars go to support the postal service, he added.

Zip Enlargement

Davis wondered about bringing into the 20770 zip code certain currently undeveloped properties in Greenbelt West that are assigned to another zip code. She felt it would add a market for the new post office.

Heaney urged the city to move quickly. Once the post office opens, it would be too late. “It’s a dynamic situation,” he said.

Indeed many uncertainties exist concerning the present Co-op food store property. The SCAN corporation holds the lease on the property, which ends after next January. The Greenbelt Arts Council (GAC) lease for its space concludes at the end of July. The post office lease ends in June.

Winding up the meeting, Heaney complimented the city on its professionalism. “We’ll try to do what we can do,” he said.

As the formal segment of the meeting was winding up, Davis ticked off the issues still unresolved: the possible use of a mobile van, the expanded zip code issue, various ideas for a CPU and the lease status of the current site.

Doug Love, among members of the audience, had the last word: “We can’t do without this service.”

For information call 301-864-0756, TTY 301-445-4512.

adjacent to a small city playground across a parking lot from the school and a short distance away from Braden Field. At the time it was built, the building was off by itself as it preceded the school.

The first user of the building was the Greenbelt Athletic Association and the building became known as the Athletic Clubhouse. According to the chapter “Social Construction” by Barbara Likowski and Jay McCarl in “Greenbelt: History of a New Town, 1937-1987,” Mary Lou Williamson, general editor, the Athletic Club was organized on February 4, 1938. In less than a year, the club had over 200 members with representatives for each block in town. The club had a four-team basketball league, a nine-team volleyball league and a seven-team softball league. A photo in Greenbelt history shows then Town Manager Roy Braden watching a checkers game at the club’s annual banquet in 1939.

In 1944, an incident involving teenagers harassing the town’s pharmacist caused the town council to find a recreational facility for the town according to Virginia Walcott Beauchamp’s chapter on “The War Years” in the Greenbelt history. Temporarily, the Athletic Club arranged for the clubhouse to be used by teens on Thursday evenings.

Izaak Walton League

At a later date, when the Athletic Club became inactive, the clubhouse was taken over by the Greenbelt Izaak Walton League. From what I heard from others, that organization was also rather inactive. However, a group of men used the building as their clubhouse, a place to get away from wife and family, a place to drink a few bottles of suds and play a little poker. By the 1960s, that group had stopped using the facility. The problem was that Greenbelt’s sewerage system had gotten old and leaky.

Water was getting into the sanitary sewer lines whenever it rained. With a good rain, the sewer lines would overflow and overflow. The clubhouse basement toilet was one of the lowest points in the sewer system and therefore one of the places where the overflow would occur. By default, the city took possession of the building. It was located upon city property and apparently had never been formally titled in any other name.

In about 1968, the Poor People’s March came to Washington with several “Mule Train” caravans arriving from various parts of the country. They were to camp out on the Washington Mall and demonstrate for federal aid to the poor and for civil rights.

One caravan came to Greenbelt for lunch on its way to Washington, with Greenbelt Community Church and St. Hugh’s providing the meals. This was a national press event, and for the day, the city turned over the old clubhouse to the press as a pressroom.

Around that time, the Greenbelt Lions Club proposed taking over the building to use as its clubhouse. The Lions worked very hard to fix up the place and spent a lot of money to prevent future sewerage backups. It didn’t work. Finally the Lions gave up and let it go back to the city.

Part of the deal with the Lions was that the city could use the clubhouse in the daytime for its Camp Pine Tree summer day camp program. The program did use the building, but spent as much time as possible out doors.

At a later date, the Greenbelt Jaycees took over the building. I am not sure how much effort they put into fixing up the building. But they too abandoned it after a while.

In 2002, Director of Planning and Community Development Celia Craze proposed spending $30,000 to convert the building to an animal shelter. That proposal got nowhere.

In 2004, the Greenbelt Disabled American Veterans proposed using the building. It asked $10,000 from council to help fix up the building. That proposal also got nowhere and later the city concluded that the building was not in good enough condition to be restored.

Telephone-Bank Fraud A Growing Concern

A warning has been issued by state Comptroller William Donald Schaefer alerting Maryland taxpayers about a telephone scam that targets users of direct deposit. A Maryland taxpayer receiving a tax refund this year reported to the Comptroller's Office that a caller using the name Sara Merkley identified herself as a "national verification official" with the state of Maryland, at 866-751-9634. No such position or office exists.
"I want to make it clear that no one has compromised our system," said Schaefer. "At the same time, taxpayers need to be aware that crooks are out there trying to get people to give up personal and private information. Be vigilant. Ask a lot of questions and be very careful about giving personal information out over the phone."

The fraudulent caller asked to verify the bank account number of the Maryland taxpayer who received the call. No information was given and when the taxpayer later attempted to check the source of the call, they received an automated response that the call could not be completed as dialed.

"Under no circumstances do we call taxpayers and ask for personal banking information," added the comptroller. "It's rare but if for any reason a direct deposit refund fails or is rejected, we immediately issue a paper check."

stolen: a 1998 Chrysler Cirrus 4-door from the 9100 block Edmonston Court; a red 1997 Chrysler Sebring convertible, Maryland tags HSH872 from the 7700 block Mandan Road; and a blue 2005 Lincoln LS 4-door, Maryland tags 3BHY11 from Beltway Plaza.
Nine stolen vehicles were recovered, three by Greenbelt police and six by outside police departments. No arrests were made in any of the recoveries. Two sets of tags, HLG417 and 5AGR34, were not recovered and are still out as stolen.

Masterly Music Recital Is Heard by Public

by Eli Flam

Earlier this month, a card in Chef Lou's shop at Roosevelt Center invited viewers to a recital of original jazz tunes by pianist Russell Wilson, the night of March 16 at the University of Maryland. Kevin Pace would be on bass and Charles Ostle, drums. Not noted: The performance was for Greenbelter Wilson's master's degree in jazz.
To judge by the enthusiastic audience, he won it flying high. First came "Out the Door," an adroit stroll along the keyboard that he said was primed by a post-haircut walk. "Look at You" highlighted an ingratiating, inviting approach well-rooted in swing. "Completion" featured a fluent workout by bassist Pace. Wilson folded into his "B-Flat Minor Blues" after Ostle's crisp drumming with a spare series of notes a la Count Basie; elsewhere he showed traces of such standouts as Mose Allison and Herbie Hancock, while "Victory Dance" sported funky boogaloo-ish touches.

As the audience stood and clapped, Wilson left the stage to return with an accordion. Accompanied by ever-ready Pace and Ostle, he played an affecting "Nocturne."
Performing in many venues, Wilson is pianist in The President's Own United States Marine Band and has finished a bachelor's degree in classical piano. Come April 9 to 14, he plans to be helping on his church's Mission Gulf Coast.

"Of Mice and Men" at Copland Festival

stars Burgess Meredith and Lon Chaney, Jr. as migrant workers George and Lennie, who struggle for the American Dream during the Great Depression. This film will be shown in Gowan Hall Auditorium, Catholic University at no charge.

Garten Is Semi-finalist in “Dream Job” Contest

by Natalie McGill

Greenbelt resident Sherry Garten’s dream of combining her art skills and nutrition knowledge to create informative and fun children’s coloring books is close to becoming reality thanks to Kiplinger Magazine.

The publication, in conjunction with career consulting firm, Dream In You, picked Garten and 24 others as semi-finalists for the first national Dream Job Contest. Dream In You co-founder Elizabeth Kanna said there were more than 3,500 applicants, which meant more than 3,500 500-word essays to read. Essays were judged based on criteria such as eloquence, originality, intellectual honesty and an example of previous attempts to live the dream.

Garten said she nearly cried in disbelief upon hearing she was a semi-finalist.

“They called me and let me know I was one of the 25,” Garten said. “I laughed and asked them, ‘Well, how many applied, 26?’”

Garten, who has bachelor degrees in psychology and dietetics from the University of Maryland, said she has seen children become more obese over the years but attributes this trend not just to eating bad foods but also to overall improper nutrition.

Her desire to inform coupled with her studies at Washington D.C.’s Corcoran College of Art and Design, resulted in three coloring books: “Dr. Granny and the Big Nutrients,” “Captain Vitamin and the Vitamin Kids” and “Ms. Mineral and the Mineralettes.”

“[It is a way to] read and color your way into understanding good nutrition,” Garten said. “They can start playing a part and having good health.”

Kanna said all the essays were phenomenal but it was the passion in Garten’s that influenced the judges.

“She already had success with Dr. Granny and she never really had given up on it,” Kanna said. Her passion is for helping kids; it was always a part of her thought process. [The essay] was original and she received high scores from all the judges.”

By March 24, the 25 will be whittled down to 3 finalists. Finalists receive a $5,000 prize and career counseling from a celebrity mentor specializing in his or her field. Celebrities such as “Chicken Soup for the Soul” co-author Mark Victor Hansen and first American woman in space, Sally Ride, are among the list of mentors.

All 25 finalists had to submit a digital essay (i.e. a video) showcasing passion for his or her craft. Garten remains grateful to the Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket for letting her use its newly renovated produce section as a backdrop during filming.

Her film ended on a humorous note, where in the ending credits it read, “No fruits and vegetables were harmed in the making of this video.”

Kids Make Mobiles at Arts Drop-in

There will be a free arts drop-in program for children ages 3 to 8 on Sunday, March 26 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Old Parish House, 4711 Knox Road (corner of Dartmouth Avenue) in College Park. Participating children will make mobiles with arts drop-in instructor Aaron Springer, who will lead this free-form arts class for children and parents. All children must be accompanied by an adult. For more information call 301-927-3013 or email info@cpae.org.

The College Park Arts Exchange is funded in part by the City of College Park, a grant from the Prince George’s Arts Council, PGAC Super Circle and the M-NCPPC, along with a grant by Target Corporation.

Hospital Hosts Blood Drive March 30

Doctors Community Hospital and the Greenbelt Lion’s Club in partnership with the American Red Cross will hold a blood drive on Thursday, March 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the hospital’s campus at 8118 Good Luck Road in the DSE Room on the 5th floor of the Medical Office Building. To schedule a time for donation call 301-552-8060.

Blood is a precious resource for which there is no substitute. With the life span of blood cells as little as five days for platelets and 42 days for red cells, the American Red Cross depends on healthy members of the community to give blood every day. Over 1,300 blood donations are needed daily to supply the needs of patients in this community. Each blood donation can be separated into components and may help three or more sick or injured people.

To be eligible to donate blood a person must be at least 17 years old, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good general health. Donors can safely give blood every 56 days. Bring some form of positive identification such as a driver’s license, blood donor card or work or school photo ID.

It only takes 20 minutes to donate; it is a simple, safe, life-saving and selfless gift that millions of Americans can give. Join in a day of giving.

Call 301-552-8060 to make an appointment.

Dog’s Health Info Urgently Needed

On Monday, March 20 a Greenbelt man and his leashed 4-month-old puppy were attacked by a young mixed Bull terrier at Northway Fields. The dog was with a young man who was accompanied by a young woman with a boxer. When the dog ran aggressively toward the man and puppy, the puppy’s owner picked it up and held it high. The dog, not on a leash, charged and jumped, biting both. The young man, his companion and the dogs left the scene. The bitten puppy is on the far left shown in the photo on page 2.

Health information about the dog is urgently needed to avoid a series of rabies shots. The mixed Bull terrier is young, under a year, estimated at about 8 months and is light brown and white. It appears to be a Staffordshire Bull Terrier.

Anyone with information about this dog is urged to call Animal Control Officer Susie Hall at 301-474-6124 or the victim at 301-474-2721 right away. The person bitten wants readers to know they are not badly injured and are seeking medical information only, not compensation.

Special Program Helps Disabled Students

Prince George’s County Public Schools (PGCPS) is helping students with disabilities work toward bright futures through a “Career Club” program designed to help special needs students at 10 high schools transition successfully from school to work. Eleanor Roosevelt High School is one of the 10 schools included in the program.

Utilizing a 2006 state grant and partnerships with adult service providers and the local business community, these schools are engaging students in motivating activities that introduce them to the world of work, self-determination and career planning.

A $40,000 Discretionary Grant for Transition from School to Work was awarded by the Maryland State Department of Education. A 12-session, after-school Career Club for Intensive Resource students in grades 10 and 11 has been established at each high school. Career Clubs meet once a week in the fall and spring semesters.

To facilitate this project, the Special Education work study coordinators were provided staff development training in career assessment and programming to strengthen the student transition process. A workforce enhancement/partnership brochure is being produced to communicate ways for businesses and agencies to be involved.

As part of the grant project, special education students receive small group and individualized instruction in more than one academic area. In 10th grade students are enrolled in the Intense Resource classes and receive an introduction to the workplace through situational job sampling, a weekly opportunity for students to do job shadowing in a variety of workplace settings. In 11th grade they sample various employment settings and, as seniors, they are enrolled in the DOE class component with instruction in career development programming.

Down-home “Daughters” Sounds Off at Arts Center

by Eli Flam

Dealing with four generations of Irish-American women, “Daughters”— the new play at the Greenbelt Arts Center — opened on St. Patrick’s Day, March 17. The local angle has been further sought by setting the scene in the Greenbelt kitchen of the Delaneys.

Joining mother Clare (Jo Rake) are older daughter Tessie (Gillian Hurley) and her younger sibling Patty Ann (Michelle Reed), with baby Johnny in tow, plus dodderly Grandma (Beatriz Mayoral) and vivacious Moira (Rachel A. Simms), Tessie’s 17-year-old daughter. Grandma can’t speak, only eat Clare’s soup and cast concerned looks as issues old and new fuel contention between the others.

Slashing charges and weighty revelations soon ignite tindery emotions and inflame ties. Central to the sharpest disputes are never-seen menfolk. Patriarch Da, confined to his bedroom, plays Irish songs on a phonograph, while the long-rival sisters have husbands to worry about and young Moira’s Richard sounds too good to be true.

A common cry in the Delaney kitchen as early March morphs into early April is, “Something’s goin’ on!” The crier demands to know what’s the secret; mother Clare, brogue and all, in seeking to allay concerns often achieves the opposite effect. Her poking cracks about Patty Ann’s weight and eating proclivities provide recurrent comic relief. Ditto for her comment that if she died and went to hell, “I couldn’t stand the heat.” Later she wonders who sent the horseshoe wreath when Grandma died with a card that read, “Good luck.”

Director Rick Starkweather, speaks of “a lot of role reversals” among the women in John Morgan Evans’ play. This is most clearly seen with the need to baby Grandma. All the actresses weigh in with energy and a strong sense of their role’s individuality.

The other producers are Jenn Alexander and Gillian Hurley. Trix Whitehall doubles as stage manager and music director. Gillian Hurley designed and supervised building of the set. Tom Zanner is light designer/engineer, Joseph Harris sound technician. Jenn Alexander doubles with costumes, Jo Rake with properties. Penny Martin did the Celtically flavored program, which jests that lighting technician Tommy Zanner “made his theatrical debut as a prince many years ago. He’s been working his way down in the world ever since.” Vinnie Degiorgio is stage crew and James and Barbara Hurley the construction crew.

On opening night, the departing audience could hear lively Irish music from the crowded New Deal Café. Roosevelt Center was doing its share of marking St. Patrick’s Day — or night.

At the Arts Center, additional show times for “Daughters” are Friday/Saturday nights March 24, 25, 31, April 1 and April 7 and 8 at 8 p.m., with Sunday matinees on March 26 and April 2 at 2 p.m. Call 301-441-8770 for reservations. There is a fee.

And for Everyone Who Has Lost a Special Pet

Rainbow Bridge

- Author Unknown

Just this side of heaven is a place called Rainbow Bridge.

When an animal dies that has been especially close to someone here, that pet goes to Rainbow Bridge. There are meadows and hills for all of our special friends so they can run and play together. There is plenty of food, water and sunshine and our friends are warm and comfortable.

All the animals who had been ill and old are restored to health and vigor. Those who were hurt or maimed are made whole and strong again, just as we remember them in our dreams of days and times gone by.

The animals are happy and content, except for one small thing. They each miss someone very special to them, who had to be left behind.

They all run and play together but the day comes when one suddenly stops and looks into the distance. Her bright eyes are intent; her eager body quivers. Suddenly she begins to run from the group, flying over the green grass, her legs carrying her faster and faster.

You have been spotted and when you and your special friend finally meet, you cling together in joyous reunion, never to be parted again. The happy kisses rain upon your face. Your hands again caress her beloved face as you look once more into the trusting eyes of your pet, so long gone from your life but never absent from your heart.

Then you cross Rainbow Bridge, together . . .
